“Ronnie was one of my best friends growing up in Fort Cobb. We hung around quite a bit and had a lot of fun. We both had mini bikes and would ride up and down the streets and sidewalks of town. Running stop signs, dodging cars on the streets and people on the sidewalks. This caused the town newspaper to print an article that the mini bikes were illegal to ride on public streets and sidewalks! But that was ok because then came the motorcycles,, transportation to the peanut fields to move irrigation pipe for money in order to buy gas and cigarettes. Our FFA show pigs would usually be penned together so we spilt the care and cost of feed. We also had a brief interest, brief for me, in rodeoing, he always looked cool in his cowboy hat. And Ronnie always seemed to get the girl,, or at least,, he was the one the girls wanted.. Pretty much lost touch with Ronnie in the 50 years since moving from Fort Cobb,, I’m sad about that.. RIP Ronnie Joe!
